This is a public conduct record. Entries identify a marketplace handle and its platform only. They contain NO personally identifying information: no legal name, no address, no contact details, and nothing about who filed a report. Every entry is a report backed by what was checked, not a verdict, and any entry is corrected or removed if it does not hold up. A handle can dispute its entry at any time.

TikTok live VODs and screenshots on file

This seller was reported for misrepresenting card values, by claiming inflated values and asking prices well above documented comparable sales, including pricing on the basis of a top PSA grade the cards are not guaranteed to receive. Shown here as reported. This is a report, not a verdict.

CORROBORATING SOURCE

TikTok live 2026-08-26 (captured video + transcript on file)

On 2026-08-26 the seller ran a live auction of raw (ungraded) Pokemon singles. Prices were anchored to sealed-product/box cost and bids on raw cards were steered toward graded-card value. Viewers who questioned the pricing were removed from the room: a viewer who noted a Charizard was worth about $10 was banned, and immediately after, a viewer who asked what the price of the box has to do with a raw card value was told "I pulled this and I can sell for whatever I want to" and then banned. A two-Charizard lot sold for $17.

The seller's own recorded audio from the 2026-08-26 live shows him directing bids on raw cards to graded-card value. On a raw Charizard he said "you have to bid off value, pay it off value, grade this make about 600 bucks" and "get this grade to make some money." He stated he does not grade cards and "sell only raw singles," and dismissed an on-air value question with "what kind of question is that." He also quoted a "$58" gradeable-copy figure while selling the raw card.

During the 2026-08-26 live, when card values were called out in chat the comments were pushed off-screen by a rapid coordinated flood of messages. A cluster of accounts was observed posting the identical phrase "BEST LIVE WITH HEAT" in unison during the live: RetroTrades.TCG, cirstiboi, dani, Josh Lovely, Paris Jules, godsent8443, and lorenaquintero503. This coordinated flooding is consistent with undisclosed moderators burying value call-outs before other viewers can read them.

Multiple independent viewers priced the cards during the 2026-08-26 live and called out the markup, for example noting a card was about $10 on TCGplayer, and asked about condition and grading. Buyers in the room are visibly recognizing the gap between the pitched prices and the cards actual market value.

TikTok live 2026-08-26 cards cross-checked to TCGplayer / PriceCharting / eBay sold

Cards run in the 2026-08-26 live, checked against current raw (ungraded) market value: Mewtwo Black Star Promo SVP 052 raw ~$47, pitched above $60. Mewtwo-GX Battle Academy stamped promo raw ~$10, pitched $19 as an "insane rare stamp." Mewtwo-GX Shining Legends Rainbow Rare 76/73 raw ~$85-95, pitched as "a $170 card, plus $140-ish." Iron Valiant ex Gold Hyper Rare (Paradox Rift) raw ~$5-6, pitched $12 on a "low population" claim. Blastoise ex and Venusaur ex (SV 151 Double Rares) raw ~$1-4 each, sold in inflated multi-card "lots." Eevee ex Special Illustration Rare 167/131 raw ~$150-185, bundled "four for one." Across the show, raw singles were consistently pitched at graded or above-market prices.

At least one of the accounts running the coordinated "BEST LIVE WITH HEAT" flood did more than cheer: the account posting as lorenaquintero503 also engaged in the pricing during the live, naming a card ("Mewtwo GX") and echoing the seller's figure ("140 ish") at the moment the seller was quoting that card at "$140-ish." An undisclosed moderator who also reinforces the seller's asking prices to the room is a shill signal. Whether these accounts also win the lots they hype could not be confirmed from this partial capture and is being checked against the full bid/winner feed.
